

Sweta Chakraborty is completing her PhD from the School of Law and Government in Dublin City University, Ireland in 2021. Her research interests include religion, nonreligion, postcolonial studies and the philosophy of sciences. An alumna of St. Xavier's College (Autonomous), Kolkata, she completed her Masters and M.Phil in Sociology from the University of Hyderabad. She has also been a research associate for different projects at the University of Delhi, ICSSR and the University of Hyderabad. She has presented her work in conferences and seminars across Europe and India and is a founder-member of the Irish Association of South Asian Studies. She is also an editor of the open-access web-journal Irish Journal of South Asian Studies and a core organizer of the Ireland India Institute Postgraduate Conference on South Asia. Her PhD thesis is titled Politics of Superstition: The trinary of superstition, religion and secularism in India.

Publication:

Chakraborty, S. and Harikrishnan, S. 2020. 'Hinduism in Ireland' in Handbook of Hinduism in Europe edited by Kent Jacobsen, Muzzafar Alam and Johannes Bronkhorst, Brill.

Forthcoming Publications:

2021: Chakraborty, S. 'The Fatigue of Belonging: Decolonising the Academia', Special Issue, Religion and Gender.

2021: Chakraborty, S. 'The Politics of Superstitions: Claim-makings of the Hindu nationalists and the rationalists'. Journal of Secularism and Nonreligion.

Research Projects: Research Assistant (01/2012-11/2012), UPE Phase II, University of Hyderabad, India

Project Title: 'Contesting Crop Sciences: A Study on Understanding the Contexts of Alternative Knowledge Claims and Institutional Responses'. Led by Prof. R. Reddy, this project involved collection of data from agricultural scientists across India and using new software and applications to evaluate the same.

Research Associate (12/2013-03/2015), University of Delhi, India, Dept. of Sociology

Project Title: 'A Study of the Types of Stratification among Muslims in Kolkata, West Bengal'. Funded by ICSSR, this project was led by Prof. A. Dasgupta and the research involved ethnography in West Bengal and Archival research in Dhaka, Bangladesh.