Course description/objective	The course intends to familiarize the students with certain key concepts for analysing world politics and also certain core theoretical issues in the field of International Political Economy (IPE). The paper also addresses issues pertaining to the relationship between security and economic affairs, the tensions between national and international loci for decision making on matters of global economic governance and politics of international trade, finance and labour. The centrality of North – South conflict in several domains, especially that of global environmental governance and the role of global social movements in resisting pressures of globalisation are also sought to be highlighted.
